HAND CUT OFF IN GIN

P. R. Palmer lost his right hand Monday afternoon when the member was caught in gin saws in some manner as he and a fellow employee of the round bale gin were graphiting some parts. The hand was torn to shreds and severed above the wrist before the machinery could be stopped. Medical aid was summoned, and the young man given prompt attention, and save for considerable suffering he is reported as doing nicely at this time. Palmer had been employed at the gin for the past five months, and it is probable that the Workman Compensation Insurance, which all such institutions are compelled by law to carry, will provide for him a partial recompense for the loss of his hand. Palmer is a laborer and well known about town, having worked here for several years at various jobs, and has become known as a very energetic worker. He has a wife and small children.
